OUTLINE

What to expect over 2 days

Differentiation is a vital skill for all teachers in any Australian classroom, where the range of student abilities, interests and needs are so varied, including students with disability and those who may be gifted and/or talented. Teachers are now expected to differentiate and personalise learning to cater for the full range of abilities in their classrooms, however many are asked to do this with limited training, or without knowing how to connect differentiated practice to other aspects of teaching. In order for differentiated practice to be effective, it must be systematic and the lens through which other teacher tasks, such as assessment and program design, are practiced. Teachers who are highly skilled in differentiation are those who can ensure all students are learning and making progress.

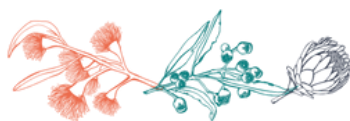

This is a comprehensive course covering all aspects of educating differentiation, including:

DAY ONE – 7 May 2024

- Exploring definitions, the research, ACARA advice and Australian Professional Standards for Teachers.
- Understanding levels of thinking and models of differentiation.
- Pre and formative assessment (including ongoing and flexible assessment).
- Strategies to plan differentiation activities & tasks - tiered tasks, learning objectives, success criteria.

DAY TWO – 21 May 2024

- Applying key principles in the classroom - flexible grouping and respectful language.
- Making it work in the classroom - behaviour management & working independently.
- Designing differentiation programmes and units of work.
- Assessment, student feedback and reporting.
